CREATURE FEATURE WHITE-TAILED DEER FAWNS

ERE IN NY STATE, MOST fawns Lare born between late May and mid-June. They can walk shortly after birth, but most of their early days are spent lying still as a way to escape detection. Every spring, people stumble upon these tiny fawns, curled $up\,motionless\,in\,tall\,grass\,or\,the\,forest.$ They look around for a mother doe, and seeing none, assume the baby has been abandoned or orphaned. Meaning well, they "rescue" the fawn, removing it from its resting place. Sadly, many of these fawns do not survive human intervention. In reality, a fawn is rarely abandoned or orphaned; rather, the mother doe has nursed her baby and left it in a safe place while she keeps her distance. This helps keep predators from discovering the fawn. She will return just to nurse her baby, 3-4 times a day. The fawn has a freezein-place instinct that, along with its nearly scentless dappled coat, makes it virtually invisible to predators and people. By the end of its second week, a fawn starts spending more time with the doe. It will also begin sampling grass and leaves. By 10 weeks of age it doesn't depend on milk anymore, though it will continue to nurse occasionally and remain with its mother through the winter. Wildlife experts advise: "If You Care, Leave It There." Resist the urge to touch a fawn or to linger close. Do not interfere in any way unless the animal has an obvious injury or a dead doe is discovered nearby. Should the fawn genuinely need human intervention, you can find contact info for your regional DEC office and a listing of licensed wildlife rehabilitators at the following link: https://www.dec.ny.gov/ animals/261.html

MIKE'S FISH TANK FISH FACTS

T'S GETTING WARMER AND WARMER out. Here is a suggestion. ▲ When you buy fish, do it when you are on your way home.

The water in the bag of fish is going to warm up quite quick, and as water warms, oxygen levels go down putting your fish at risk. Also when you do get home, only float your bag of fish 4 to 5 minutes. That is all it takes to equalize the temperatures. The longer you float a bag, the worse it gets. The temperature in the bag rises as it floats and oxygen levels once again will be depleted fast.

The quicker you get a fish home and into the tank, the better your fish will do.

Keep in mind the more hiding places you have, the better. You are bound to get a few territorial fish, even community fish can be naughty at times. An abundance of hiding areas will benefit your fish in the long run. Also the bigger the tank, the better your fish will do. More space means less fighting, and water quality does not go downhill as fast in a big tank.

Also, in a new tank just set up, go easy on fish at least the first 6 weeks. I say it a lot, you need that good bacteria in your tank. It eats the ammonia the fish produce. Too many fish too soon and they will die in that ammonia environment.

I have had people put 30 fish in a new 55 gallon tank, and inevitably, the fish get sick and die. Go slow the first 6 weeks. Keep your tropical fish tanks temperature around 78 to 79 degrees. At the higher temps, they fight off sicknesses better.

Goldfish on the other hand like it cold, so do not use a heater on them. In the summer, if your house gets too hot and you have goldfish, blow a fan on the tank, sometimes this will help bring the temps down. Adding ice cubes is not a good idea. It creates pockets of cold that are not healthy to your goldfish.

Pets A Plenty is located in the Block buster Video Plaza,Rte 281 Cortland, 753-9213. Open 7 days a week. We now have a website. WWW.PETSAPLENTY.BIZ. Ο check it out. I post care sheets, coupons, new animal arrivals, contests

TODAY IS ALL THAT MATTERS 'WHAT DO YOU WANT & WHAT'S YOUR WHY?": PART 1 OF 2

 \mathbf{I} 'VE BEEN LISTENING TO PEOPLE describe how they long to experience a life of purpose and fulfillment for many years, and along with that comes the descriptions of the barriers they perceive are in the way. Those who remain fixed to the belief that those barriers exist outside of themselves (circumstances, health issues, financial hindrances, lack of love, lack of time) suffer deeply and little changes on its own; Fulfillment and Contentment don't just spontaneously arise- for they require a prepared vessel to be able to fill. The misperception that barriers to the feeling of the experience of Fulfillment are dependent upon external is a root cause of being stuck in a perpetual cycle of suffering.

One's Freedom is the ability to interrupt this pattern, and examine where one's own mind and perceptions could be confused and misleading. The most important place to start to begin to free yourself from the limitations of the mind is by investing time and reflection with these 2 Game Changing Questions:

1.What do I Want? What feeling do I cherish so deeply that when I experience it, I am so happy

2.What is my Conviction? (my 'Why') What do I believe so powerfully that It would inspire the way I live my life right Now?

Imagine your life as the Clarity, Freedom, and Love you could feel if you knew what you wanted to experience in your life - perhaps Connection or Meaning or Awe - and you began to recognize that your assumptions about life, yourself and others, left unquestioned are the source of Inner suffering; the very barriers that you yourself can dismantle.

Knowing what you Want is the first step of a process that leads to deep fulfillment. And, something ridiculous will happen when you ask yourself that question; What do I Want? You will hear something in response that brings tears to your eyes, if you dare Hear it. You'll feel immensely uplifted when you Hear that One Word that embodies what you want; 'Joy'. 'Peace'. 'Freedom'. And then, you'll hear a second voice. A voice that will put you down and say things like; 'you can't have that, that's ridiculous- no one will ever like you' or 'that's impossible' or, 'don't bother, you'll mess it up like you usually do' or, 'that can't happen for you, only for other

There's a voice within that is potent and caring and resonates with Truthfulness and Inspiration; and then there's another voice that whispers put downs and criticisms, relentlessly about yourself and other people. It a voice that never tires on its own, and always seems to have and endless supply of critical opinions. Believing this voice is THE barrier between You and a life of Fulfillment, Awe, and Connection. The source of suffering is there; believing and living in union with that voice instead of nourishing the Voice within that says 'You are worthy of

So, for the next two weeks, start to listen for which voice within you gets the most 'air time'. Just notice. This is the first step moving a bit close to the life you are worthy of experiencing; a life you Cherish is your BirthRight...
