GOING, GOING, GOING By Shana Karn, Co-Owner of The Second Knob, 129 North St. Druden

VERY SMALL BUSINESS OWNER HAS asked themselves the same questions about where their business is going: Do I keep going? Do I go online? Do I go out of business?

I was chatting with a fellow small business owner and was sad to learn that she was considering closing her store-front and moving her small business to an exclusively online platform. And, while sad, I understand completely. With the last three years being financially hard for many local, small businesses, the dream of the brick and mortar store is one that grows more and more difficult to keep alive.

Closing a store-front or transitioning to an online platform isn't only hard on business owners who, like many of us, truly enjoy being a part of the community and chatting with our friends and neighbors when they come into the shop! Unfortunately, one small business closure can have a negative ripple effect on a local economy. Small, local businesses depend on each other to keep the local economy fully functioning. If one local business closes, the chance that people may have to go outside of the community to fulfill their needs increases taking potential sales away from other local businesses and local sales tax dollars out of the community. "Why does this matter to me?" you may ask. It matters to all members in the community because local businesses circulate three times more money back into the local economy and who really wants ANOTHER empty commercial property next door?

Happy

However, for the small business owner, shuttering a storefront-especially one that struggles to compete against bigger chain/box stores-may be the only viable option. Closing a store-front dramatically reduces costly overhead-rent, utilities, payroll, property repairs and inventory. However, transitioning to exclusive online sales is a "double edged sword!" E-commerce options are drastically less costly than store-front operation but e-commerce is significantly more competitive and standing out from other [similar] online businesses can be really difficult. In the minds of many people, brick and mortar businesses (those with a store-front presence) are more reputable than one that is completely online. For many small business owners, the store-front is their primary connection to their community.

There are a lot of suggestions floating around the Internet for struggling small (retail) business owners- the best tips include diversification (offering something different or in addition to what you currently offer); reduce non-selling inventory: get rid of ANY stock that isn't selling by having a huge clearance sale; reduce overhead costs: try to reduce rent expense, decrease payroll, "shop" wholesalers for the best deals on inventory; expand your hours, etc.etc. etc....

As a small business owner, some of the suggestions can seem next to impossible!

Like many of us do when faced with a challenge, a list of pros and cons can help. If the cons far outweigh the pros, maybe closing a store-front is the best option. And, while we all want to be a contributing member in our community- and truly love our store-fronts and our face to face time with our customers- we cannot sacrifice "making a living!"

As we wind down our eighth year in business- we are facing some big decisions-like many of our fellow business owners. In the meantime, we've started implementing some huge price reductions to move specific items. Our clearance room is now 75% off (rather than 50%) and our antiques and collectibles have had drastic price reductions. If it's been a little while since you've been in, we would love to see you and have you take advantage of our sales!

New fish, animals and supplies come almost every week. Don't forget we carry all the supplies you need for your pet such as treats, foods, toys, decorations, cages and more.

We get our baby ball pythons from a local breeder and his snakes are very friendly, young and small.

Baby rats are also available as pets. There is an assortment of colors and we breed them right here at the pet shop. They make fantastic pets. We have a litter right now but are not ready to go yet.But you can come in and pick out one you like and we will hold it for you till its ready to go.

Our lizard selection is really good right now, iguanas, bearded dragons, leopard geckos, green basilisks, swifts,crested geckos, sandfish, skinks to name a few. We also carry hermit crabs and their supplies.

CREATURE FEATURE ANIMALS IN CHRISTMAS TRADITIONS

OVE OVER REINDEER! THERE ARE other animals celebrated IVL around the world at Christmastime! In some Latino cultures, there is a Christmas Eve morning church service called Misa de Gallo - "the Rooster's Mass." Legend says the rooster was the first bird to announce the Christ child's birth by crowing at midnight. Scandinavian Christmas decorations commonly feature a Yule Goat, symbolizing the animal once eaten as part of the holiday feast. Some Yule Goat displays are enormous and decorated with lights. Before giving birth to Jesus, Mary traveled to Bethlehem on the back of a donkey. Some say the lowly animal was then blessed with an image of a cross on its back. The donkey is celebrated for its humble role in the Christmas story as people around the world place its figurine in the manger. The robin's connection to Christmas dates back to Victorian England when postmen used to wear bright red coats and were nicknamed "Robins." The bird became a popular subject on Christmas cards, often depicted carrying holiday mail in its beak. In Eastern Europe, there is an enchanting story about a widow and her children who were too poor to decorate their Christmas tree. Kind spiders spun webs on the tree, and when the family awoke on Christmas morning, the sun's rays turned the webs to silver and gold. Australians sing a Christmas song called "Six White Boomers," where Santa gives his reindeer a break upon arriving in The Land Down Under and harnesses up six white kangaroos. Imagine that!
