MIKE'S FISH TANK BETTAS

IRST I'd LIKE TO SAY we are still open and our new hours are below. I hope everyone is well.

A lot of customers ask me about super delta bettas and half moon bettas. Delta tail betta fish are single tailed bettas.

Their tails have sharp, straight edges but they have a span of about 130 degrees or less. They are often mistaken for Halfmoons but Halfmoon betta fish have a 180-degree span.

Delta tail bettas have a delta or triangular shape, which explains their name. This type of betta fish also has symmetrical tails.

Super Delta betta are an enhanced version of the Delta. They are one step closer to the Halfmoon variety.

Be mindful though, of keeping bettas together in the same tank, as they are known to be very aggressive fish. They are available in various colors and color-mixes that are quite eyecatching when on display in any aquarium.

A lot of people do not think you can put a betta with other fish, but it's ok as long as you do not have any fish that will go after their big tails. Bettas usually only fight with other bettas. They rarely fight with other fish.

Although you can put female bettas together, they usually get Bettas build bubble nests, which the male does. Betta breeders tell me it can be hard to get a male and female to pair up.

Sometimes they go through several females before mating starts. And I have been told when the babies hatch,the baby males will start to fight even at that young age. One breeder says he has all these baby food jars everywhere with tiny baby male bettas in them. How crazy is that.

CREATURE FEATURE BALD EAGLE NESTS

BONDED EAGLE PAIR BEGINS building a nest a month or Atwo in advance of their brood's arrival. Constructed with interwoven sticks and lined with vegetation, the nest is remarkable in that it is 4-5 feet in diameter and 2-4 feet deep. Eagles exhibit strong nest site fidelity, often re-using the same nest each year. Upon returning, they add another foot or two of new material; so over time, the avian nursery can reach mammoth proportions and weigh over a ton. They defend the nest area from rivals and predators. After mating, the female lays 1-3 eggs a day or so apart, which hatch in the order they were laid. Both parents share incubation duties, but the female spends more time on the nest. Hatchlings are fed tiny bits of fish and meat. As eaglets are unable to regulate their body temperature, the parents keep them warm and also spread their massive wings to create shade on hot days. The male provides most of the food early on, while the female stays by the nest; but as the weeks progress and the chicks approach their fledging time, she becomes the main provider. The parents begin to spend more time away from the nest to coax the youngsters to fly. At 10-12 weeks the fledglings each take their leap of faith, but remain near the adults for another month or two, honing their flight and survival skills.
